

Mercy, of its nature, is a pure gift. It is something we all stand in need of, and hence it is something we must be ready to extend to others. The Lord said, 'Blessed are the merciful; they will obtain mercy,' (Source: Fr. Flor McCarthy)

FIFTH SUNDAY OF LENT

Christianity is not simply a matter of a relationship between the individual and God. It is equally concerned with the relationship between people. It has social consequences. This aspect goes back to the days of Moses and the covenant on Mount Sinai. It was because they were sharers in the same covenant with the Lord rather than for any ties of family or race that the children of Israel had an obligation to look after one another as well as an obligation to God. ### Kindness and Mercy

"Give me justice, O God, and plead my cause against a nation that is faithless"

Newsletter Sunday 13th March 2016

As we go on in life we tend to set a higher value on the virtue of kindness – plain, ordinary, everyday kindness. When we look back on our lives we remember with regret acts of unkindness. But we recall fondly times when we acted kindly. Kindness is essential to true justice. Jesus was especially kind to individuals whom he was called to judge. The classic example is the woman caught in adultery.

The story warns us against being too quick to take the high moral ground. Which of us is without sin? We must learn from the example of Jesus. He condemned the woman's sin, but refused to condemn her. It is not that sin did not matter to him. It did. But he distinguished between the sin and the sinner. He condemned the sin but pardoned the sinner.

And his over-riding motive in all of this was compassion. It wasn't a question of being liberal (anything goes), but of being compassionate. The holier a person is, the less he/she is inclined to judge others. In every human being there is a dimension which escapes the powers of judgement of any other human being.

Jesus refused to condemn her. But he did say to her, 'Go and sin no more.' In other words, he did not deny her sin. He got her to own it and take responsibility for it. It is much easier to deny it, to excuse or blame it on others. When one faces it and deals with it, there is no more blame, or regret, or remorse, or despair.

The compassion and forgiveness of Jesus give life. The woman went away free – free to change her behaviour, and to regain her self-respect. Jesus reminds us that people are capable of changing if given the chance.

The mission of the Church is to be a place of forgiveness so that those who fail (all of us in different ways and degrees) may experience the love and compassion of the One who refused to condemn. The Church ought to be a community of grace, a community free from legalism, a community which will not condemn but which will love, a community which is more concerned about mercy than justice.

A Mother's plea for Mercy

One day a mother came to plead with Napoleon for her son's life. The young man had committed a serious offence. The law was clear. Justice demanded his death. The emperor was determined to ensure that justice would be done. But the mother insisted, 'Your Excellency, I have come to ask for mercy not for justice.'

'But he does not deserve mercy,' Napoleon answered.
'Your Excellency,' said the mother, 'it would not be mercy if he deserved it.' 'So be it,' said Napoleon. 'I will have mercy on him.' And he set her son free.

ADMINISTRATOR'S COLUMN

Year of Mercy – “Be merciful, just as your Father is merciful” (Lk.6:36)

Year of Mercy

The eighth paragraph of the Papal encyclical – ‘Misericordiae Vultus’ continues. Jesus, seeing the crowds of people who followed him, realised that they were tired and exhausted, lost and without a guide, and he felt deep compassion for them (cf. Mt 9:36). On the basis of this compassionate love he healed the sick who were presented to him (cf. Mt 14:14), and with just a few loaves of bread and fish he satisfied the enormous crowd (cf. Mt 15:37). What moved Jesus in all of these situations was nothing other than mercy, with which he read the hearts of those he encountered and responded to their deepest need. When he came upon the widow of Nain taking her son out for burial, he felt great compassion for the immense suffering of this grieving mother, and he gave back her son by raising him from the dead (cf. Lk 7:15). After freeing the demoniac in the country of the Gerasenes, Jesus entrusted him with this mission: “Go home to your friends, and tell them how much the Lord has done for you, and how he has had mercy on you” (Mk 5:19). The calling of Matthew is also presented within the context of mercy. Passing by the tax collector’s booth, Jesus looked intently at Matthew. It was a look full of mercy that forgave the sins of that man, a sinner and a tax collector, whom Jesus chose – against the hesitation of the disciples – to become one of the Twelve.

SAINT PATRICK Patron of Ireland

Patrick is a link through which the people of Ireland and the people of God were brought together. Throughout their history, the people of Israel considered that they and they alone were God’s people. With the teaching of the prophets this narrow outlook gradually opened out so that by the time of Jesus, the stage was set for the expansion of God’s word to the ends of the earth.

Reflection - In Patrick’s writings, especially in his Breastplate, Christ comes across as central to everything. He was very much aware of his mission in life. Like Paul, he believed that God had appointed him as an apostle to bring the gospel where it had not yet been heard. It was Patrick’s choice to accept this mission. His response could have been otherwise. (Source: St. Paul’s Missal)

Sacrament of Reconciliation

The Sacrament of Reconciliation is not about a guilt-trip. Rather, it is about unburdening. The Lord invites us to receive from him ‘rest for our souls’ (Mt 11:29) so that he may set us free (Lk 4:18) that we may continue to seek to live ‘life to the full’ (Jn 10:10). Jesus is encountered in and through the Sacrament. The Lenten/Easter Reconciliation service takes place in St. St. Colmcille’s Swords on Monday 21st March at 7.30pm and in St. Finian’s River Valley on Tuesday 22nd March at 7.30pm.

The Bible’s Most Important People

Abraham – The new name for Abram, whom God called out of Ur of the Chaldees and into the promised land. This new name was a symbol of the covenant between God and Abraham. The Lord promised to build a nation through Abraham and his wife, Sarai (whom he renamed Sarah), though she was too old to have children. God refused to accept Ishmael, son of Abraham and Sarah’s maid, Hagar, as the child of promise. In time, God gave Sarah and Abraham, a son, Isaac, who would found the nation God promised.
